

Future Generation School: Asi Camp

Asi Camp's Future Generation Elementary and Secondary School is a place for children to make new friends, bringing smiles to their faces in the classroom and through the many activities that alleviate past trauma in focus of new memories. The school is located in a camp, where many internally displaced people now reside.

Through the engagement of NuDay's teachers, students are dedicated to their courses and are enthusiastic about each school day. Asi Camp's Future Generation School is now in its second year, and is continuing to serve children in the area through ensuring a mental and emotional growth.

The Asi Camp Future Generation School has a computer lab, encouraging students to do research on their own and making information more easily accessible.

Outside of the school year and during holidays, Asi Camp's Future Generation School turns into a community center, bringing families and friends together to celebrate. Known as "Kid Friendly Zones," NuDay Syria opens the doors of the school for recreational and educational activities, aiming to help children through the difficult memories that they may have while also enhancing their kinetic and intellectual abilities.

Student Profile: Saja

Saja comes from the Aleppo countryside, but had to leave her friends and old school behind due to the situation of her village. This transition has been tough for Saja, who misses her old life. However, Saja has found comfort in her science classes – one of her favorite subjects. Saja has been a student at the Future Generation School for two years now and has received high grades, granting her the title of "Distinguished Student."
