

Project Proposal – A Christmas of Hope for 161 Children with Cancer

Project Summary

This Christmas, Sembrando Esperanzas will bring joy and hope to 161 children in Costa Rica battling cancer. Too often, these children spend the holidays in hospitals or under financial hardship, unable to enjoy the magic of the season. With just $20 per child, sponsors will provide transportation, nutritious meals, holiday treats, fun activities with inflatables and animal shows, and a personalized gift from Santa Claus.

The Problem

For many children in Costa Rica who are battling cancer, Christmas is not a season of joy but a reminder of hardship. Instead of laughter and play, they face long hospital stays, painful treatments, and families overwhelmed by medical expenses. Most parents cannot afford holiday celebrations, gifts, or even transportation to special events. As a result, many of these children spend the holidays without the joy and hope that every child deserves.

The Solution

This project will transform Christmas for 161 children with cancer by providing them with a day of celebration, dignity, and joy. With just $20 per child, we will cover safe transportation, nutritious meals, holiday treats, recreational activities with inflatables and animal shows, and a personalized gift from Santa Claus. The event will give children the chance to laugh, play, and feel like children again, while relieving families from the financial and emotional burden of creating a holiday experience they cannot afford.

Potential Long-Term Impact

This project does more than create a Christmas party. By giving children with cancer moments of joy, play, and dignity, we strengthen their emotional resilience and provide hope that supports them during treatments and hospital stays. Families also experience relief and renewed energy, knowing their children are surrounded by care and solidarity.

In the long term, this initiative promotes a culture of compassion and community in Costa Rica. Each act of generosity helps raise awareness about the needs of children with cancer and inspires ongoing support, ensuring that no child faces illness without love, joy, and a sense of belonging.
