

Emergency Winter Aid for Children at Risk

This document provides an overview of a humanitarian project focused on supporting children living in high-risk households in Georgia during the winter season.

Project Summary

Winter is especially harsh for children growing up in families affected by serious illness, single parenthood, unstable income, and housing insecurity. Many households struggle to meet basic needs such as warm clothing, sufficient food, and safe living conditions during cold months. This project provides emergency winter assistance to help protect children's health, safety, and dignity.

Target Group

Children from high-risk households, including families affected by serious illness, single-parent households, and families facing housing and heating insecurity.

Key Activities

- Distribution of warm winter clothing
- Food assistance for children and families
- Provision of heating-related essentials
- Identification of families through community outreach
- Monitoring and responsible delivery of assistance
